Subject: Types of amendments to research proposal documents (specific amendments only)

Amendment Report (site-specific)

The Foundation for the Promotion of Human Research in Thailand, which oversees the operations of the Central Ethics Committee.

The Human Subject Research Research Committee (CREC) was established with the objective of reviewing multi-institutional research projects.

Other research projects within the scope of responsibility include reviewing research proposals and related documents from the time of application.

The initial review and ongoing revision of reports until the research project is completed is to protect the rights, safety, and well-being of volunteers participating in the research.

This is to ensure that multi-institutional research projects approved by the Central Committee at each research center are conducted with due diligence.

To ensure uniformity in procedures, we hereby define the types of reports for amendments to documents in multi-faceted research proposals.

The institution has made site-specific amendments to provide clarity and guidance to researchers in research centers as follows:

Site-specific amendments refer to modifications made specifically at that institution.

The revisions do not affect the papers of other institutions in the inter-institutional research project.

1. Types of reports that fall under the category of site-specific amendment reports include:

- 1.1) Increasing/decreasing/or changing researchers at the institution.
- 1.2) Increasing/decreasing the number of volunteers at the institution (n) without affecting the total number of volunteers nationwide (N).
- 1.3) Changes to specific information, such as changes to the name/address of the institutional research ethics committee or changes to the contact information of researchers within the institution in specific documents, which are documents that the committee...

The central government has already given its approval.

2. Site-specific amendment/addition reports that do not fall under site-specific review.

- 2.1) In the case of a change of research project leader, please submit the request to the Central Committee first, as their qualifications need to be reviewed.

- 2.2) Cases where changes affect the research project as a whole, such as:

-Adding a volunteer invitation document that is a new document never before submitted to the central committee, which may contain...

The impact on volunteers' decisions to participate in research projects.

-Adding volunteer groups or adjusting treatment, by adding resources specifically for a particular location. This type of addition includes...

This impacts the research process, as interinstitutional research should be conducted using the same process throughout.

Research Center

This is effective from now on.
